McNAMARAS

CONFESSED DYNAMITERS

"I wanted to learn of the organization in which I held office, particularly the legal end of it, and so I attended the Indianapolis College of Law and was admitted to practice in 1900.

"I am an inveterate reader, and always have been, of books treating with economics and industrial matters."

James B. McNamara, who sat quietly by while his brother talked, also was born in Cincinnati. His birthday was June 2, 1882. He attended the common schools and then learned the printer's trade, which he has followed almost continuously ever since, working in job offices in Chicago, Cleveland, Cincinnati and other cities.

"Unlike me," said John J. McNamara, "my brother has never been especially active in trades union affairs."

M'MANIGAL WHO EARLY CONFESSED

Sketch of Man Who Implicated McNamara in His Confession.

Los Angeles, Cal., Dec. 2.—Ortie E. McManigal, who, in a confession, declared that he was the confederate of John and James McNamara in a conspiracy which involved murder and destruction all over the country, lived an uneventful life, as he himself described it, up to the time he was arrested in Detroit with James B. McNamara last April, and brought to this city to be the principal witness against the brothers.

He was born at Bloomville, Ohio, April 1, 1874. His mother died when he was four years old, and his parents, who lived at the same place, took him and his sister and cared for them until he was six or seven years of age. Then his father remarried and took the children back to his home, where they remained until Ortie was about 12 years old. A separation then occurred between father and stepmother, and the children were sent to live with the father's parents in Hutchinson, Kan., where they lived for a year or two.

When McManigal was about 15 years old his father ventured for a third time into matrimony, and took his children with him to a farm near Forest, Ohio. Shortly afterward they moved to Tiffin, Ohio, where McManigal, senior, is still living.

But Mrs. McManigal, the third, objected to her husband's children, Ortie said, and so once again he and his sister were sent to the home of their mother's parents in Bloomville. There McManigal stayed until he was 19, when he returned to Tiffin to work with his father in the ice business and in stone quarries.

When war was declared against Spain in 1898, McManigal enlisted, but did not get out of the training camps. He was made orderly to an officer, a position he said he liked very much. Upon being mustered out of the military service he went to Milwaukee, where his uncle, George Behn, who figured recently in contempt proceedings here for refusing to answer questions propounded him in the grand jury room, wanted him to become a railroad worker.

He started to enter railroad employment, but later went into a quarry in Milwaukee and afterward worked at a foundry there. Then he moved to Melrose Park, a suburb of Chicago, and worked for a copper concern.

McManigal fell in love with his wife while she was visiting his relatives in Milwaukee, and married her May 8, 1901. After his marriage he became an iron worker, and joined local union No. 8, in Milwaukee, in 1903.

He worked at his trade in Louisville, Milwaukee, Chicago and other cities, then left the ranks of the iron workers to join his father and half-brother in the saloon business in Tiffin. But he had trouble there with his half-brother and sold out his liquor interest.

That was in 1906, and he remained in Tiffin, working in the iron trade, until his self-alleged connection with the McNamaras.

Of a reckless nature, McManigal earned the sobriquet "dare devil," by feats of agility on the towering skeletons of skyscrapers. In Chicago, while working on the tallest buildings, he would leap off the top story to catch a beam being swung by the derrick.

When he was a small boy, McManigal fell off a wagon, and a wheel passing over him, severely injured his head, he said.

It Pays to Buy a Good Overcoat!

One good Overcoat will give you good service for about three years, and if it is one of our Rosman Overcoats, it will still have shape and style when you are through with it. It is an extravagance to buy cheap, shoddy woollens. They do not last. We do not mean that you must pay a big price, but you should pay enough to get a dependable garment.

Let us suggest a Rosman Overcoat at $15.00 to $18.00. If you want a still better one, we have it for you, and at any price you decide upon.

We will guarantee the cloth, the fit, and the workmanship, and return your money or exchange the garment.

If you are in doubt, we are going to recommend one of our good $15.00 garments; for we know that it will give you $20.00 worth of wear and satisfaction.

The Best in Fur Coats Is None Too Good

A good fur coat—we do not necessarily mean high priced—is a source of constant pleasure and comfort to the wearer, while a cheap coat with its ever ripping seams, its poor lining and its continual hair shedding propensities proves a constant "bug bear" to its owner.

A man with a fur coat can defy the coldest winds with impunity, confident that he will be warm and comfortable, whether riding or walking.

We have a big assortment of high quality coats at exceptionally low prices this season.

If you can spare a few minutes any day we will be more than pleased to show them to you.
